"The Full Deck" was designed as a way to connect former School of Art and Design students with current ones by inviting them to participate in a show based around a common theme. First-year foundation students and alumni created the fronts of 54 playing cards, and surface pattern design students designed the backs. A communications design major designed the show installation, logo, and the packaging. "The Full Deck" was juried in by faculty from illustration, industrial and interaction design, painting, and surface pattern design.
