

Suggested audition literature

Woodwinds

Those auditioning for admission as undergraduates to the Setnor School of Music should be prepared to play scales (major and chromatic, multiple octaves as range and experience allow) and solo repertoire (contrasting pieces or contrasting movements preferred); one or more etudes may also be prepared (student's option). The audition may include sight-reading. The solo literature lists provided here are meant to offer examples of difficulty levels and styles that are most commonly heard. Prospective students are not obligated to prepare pieces from these lists. They should generally perform the most musically advanced literature they have studied, that will best demonstrate their musical background and skill level.
